Toil and Tyranny

"Let them starve," was Powers's answer. Laura was a surprised and startled woman to this stirring scene. She had never realized before that there was such a thing as starvation. Only today at luncheon she had ordered an entire roast destroyed because it had not been cooked to suit her. Probably as the result of a year she had ordered enough food thrown away to feed several of the starving families of her father's striking workmen.

A great compassion was born within her. The feast she had ordered was a wondrous pity. Putting her arms about her father's neck she asked him to tell her all about the strikers and their hungry families. Laughingly he put her from him.

"Those problems are not for little girls like you," he told her. "Go and join your guests. They will miss you." There was a troubled pucker in her brows as she left him, a pucker which air as she joined in the merriment.

CHAPTER III.

Mina Hurd was a frail and delicate woman of twenty-five. A constant battle with poverty had left its marks. Far into each night she toiled with needle in a desperate endeavor to eke out the little family's slender income.

Bent over some hand sewing, urging her weary husband on to increasing endeavors to add to the slowly increasing pile of finished garments beside her, she hardly deigned to raise her eyes from her work, when a commotion at the front door of the shabby cottage warned her that she was having visitors at an unusual time.

Two laborers appeared at the door, one of them a half-conscious man, the other a woman. The man was covered with blood. His eyes were glassy. His face shuddered and seemed too heavy for him to lift.

"Your husband has been hurt, ma'am," said one of the men, as guided by Mina, they half dragged, half carried the injured man to the scantily furnished bedroom and propped their stricken comrade in the hazy bed.

The happenings of the next few hours were as a dream to Mina. She had a hazy recollection that one of the men had called the kindly-faced and gentle Dr. Gray. She vaguely remembered having felt something like a gentle rain falling on her face. Little Mina, she dimly sensed, had helped Dr. Gray and one of the laborers dress her husband's wound.

From out the chaotic jumble of her tangled memory, one thing stood bold and clear. It was the verdict of the doctor, spoken in gentle, kindly tones: "Your husband has a severe injury to the skull. He cannot work for many weeks."

But Mina Hurd was not for the only one to whom these words had sent their terrible purport. Through the thinning of Hurd's battered temples, through the half paralyzed numbness of his brain, they penetrated to his sub-conscious understanding, and made him realize the awfulness of the poverty they foretold.

Followed days and weeks of desperate struggle for Mina while her husband slowly recovered his strength. Sitting in her chair, the injured stevedore watched his frail and faithful wife grow frailer with each passing day. Each stitch of her needle was a separate anguish to him. Each time the bit of sharpened steel entered the cloth it was as if it penetrated his soul. Small wonder he resolved, while sitting there, that John Snyder and his millionaire employer would pay—pay dearly for this tragedy of tyranny and toil in which he and his little family were playing the leading roles.

Came the day when Dr. Gray warned Mina that she could have to be careful. "That cough will get you, little woman," he said, and he kindly refused the money she proffered him. "Hush, he will hear you," Mina whispered as she looked apprehensively toward the bedroom where Hurd had gone for his morning nap. His convalescence was slow, and he needed all the rest he could get.

But her warning came too late. Hurd caught the words and understood. In half an hour he was at the gate of the lumber yard, asking to see his old antagonist. He was willing to risk another encounter with Snyder to save the health of Mina.

A new and surly gatekeeper barred the way. And he tried to force his way past the burly bully. The scuffle was short and decisive. Hurd was thrown, hurt and panting, up against the fence. He hadn't the strength of a half-grown boy.

So intently were the men watching each other that neither had heard the approach of Powers and his prospective son-in-law.

"What's the meaning of all this?" the latter asked.

"Please, Mr. Powers, have come back to work. I've been laid up. I was hurt, you know."

Recognition flashed in the face of Travis.

Chic Morning Frock

Modeled of Taffeta

A little taffeta dress—a model indeed, and in every sense of the word—which has a very high collar spreading out in two winglike points; the sleeves were very tight and the skirt very wide.

With a good cleansing cream as much of the dirt as possible. The vigor with which you scrub your skin must be determined by its condition. If your skin is thin and dry, use a pure castile soap and warm water, as you must be careful not to make the skin too dry or it will chap. If your skin is thick and greasy, you cannot scrub it too thoroughly.

Use the green soap treatment every night until you have gotten rid of the blackheads. Green soap, by the way, is not green at all, but amber in color, and is in the form of a jelly paste. Use this green soap with water as hot as can be borne.

Rub soap on your face until a free lather secures. Rinse in hot water and then apply more soap with the fingers of your hand. Then rub in clear water and apply benzine (not benzoin) to the face, with a piece of absorbent cotton. Let it remain on the skin for about five minutes. Rinse again with cold water, then massage the skin with cold cream for a few minutes. Wipe off the superfluous cream.

In the morning rinse your face in as cold water as can be borne. If possible, go over the face with a small piece of ice. Cold water and ice will contract the pores and stimulate circulation of the blood better than any astringent wash.

The following formula makes the best cleansing cream it is possible to secure: Two ounces of sweet almonds, one-quarter ounce of spermaceti, one-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of rose water, one-half ounce of almond oil, and one-half ounce of lavender oil. Melt the oil, spermaceti and wax together at a moderate heat. Then gradually add the rose water in which the lard has been dissolved. Stir the mixture briskly and constantly until it is cold. Continue the stirring until it has become soft and creamy. A good cold cream should be snowy white. It should be about the consistency of butter and free from any rancid odor.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

Marie M.—The only way you can reduce is by diet and exercise. Diet is the most important of these two measures. You simply cannot get thin unless you stop eating fat producing foods, such as butter, cream, olive oil, bacon fat, potatoes, or any starchy food. Drink lots of water. Water exercise. Walk, swim, play tennis, or any outdoor sport. But do it every day regularly. Spasmodic exercise has no effect.

Sarah—Thank you so much for your kind words. I am glad you enjoy the column. I am so sorry I cannot recommend anything for removing the birthmark with the hope of its being completely satisfactory outside of seeking a skin specialist. Skin surgery is so successful nowadays when done by experts that I would advise you to consult a skin specialist. Be sure he is a first class skin specialist, however.

Katherine—Puffiness under the eyes and puffiness of the face are almost invariably due to some kidney trouble. Drinking water frequently remedies the condition. It is necessary also to build up your general health with plenty of fresh air and exercise. It might be well for you to have a physician diagnose your case.

George—Two of the causes of baldness are dandruff and deficient circulation of blood in the scalp. The scalp becomes tight and prevents a proper flow of blood to the roots of the hair. The scalp should be thick and pliable and move freely over the bones of the skull. If you will massage your scalp every night for about ten minutes you will stimulate the circulation and the roots of the hair will get proper nourishment. I shall be glad to send you my formulas for hair tonic and cure for dandruff if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Alma L. W.—The rough, drawn condition of your face may be caused from the soap you are using. The pure imported castile soap is the best. Try it, and if you find that the condition still exists stop using soap for a while and use instead a mixture of oatmeal and almond meal. Make little cheese-cloth bags about five or six inches square and put in about four tablespoonfuls of the mixture in the proportion of two-thirds oatmeal and one-third almond meal. Place a bag in water and when it becomes milky use it as you would a washcloth.

Dr. Prady's Health Talks

FOOT STRAIN POPULAR STRAIN.

"Eye strain" has had its inning; brain strain occasionally wins a verdict of foot strain, otherwise called broken arches, falling or dropped arches, flat feet, pronated feet, weak feet.

Perfectly flat feet are not necessarily painful and may be very serviceable. Relaxation or weakness insufficient to be detected by any but the professional eye not rarely causes much pain and trouble.

Abnormally high arched feet are more likely to give trouble than feet with low arches, though this is not commonly understood.

The pain and disability in these cases cannot be attributed to the lowering of the arch, but rather to the muscle strain, be the case one of low arch, or high arch. Try to hold your arm out horizontally for five minutes and you will realize how painful muscle strain can be. The mere fact that the foot arch is not found fallen or dropped does not prove that the trouble is not due to foot strain.

No shoe is made which conforms to the shape of the normal foot, although "orthopedic" and "anatomical" models, so-called by their manufacturers—are legion. They do very nicely for the back part of the foot, but in front they leave much to be desired, for every model marketed is too narrow to permit a natural spreading of the forefoot; the shoemakers have taught people to think a narrow toe is the proper fashion, so even the special models constructed by the shoe manufacturers never forget that the width of the forefoot is naturally considerably greater than any other part of the foot, and that the forefoot is really the base upon which the weight of the body rests at every step. A constricted base is never stable.

Don'ts for Persons With Foot Strain.

Don't wear pointed shoes. Give the toes a chance.

Don't wear too flat heels. One inch is a good height.

Don't put arch props in your shoes.

Don't imagine a high arch is not subject to strain.

Don't forget that the general muscular tone and state of health has an important bearing.

Don't toe out. Toe straight ahead, or walk a trifle pigeon-toed.

Don't splint a weak foot without the advice of your doctor or an orthopedic surgeon.

Don't wear low shoes if the ankles turn in.

Don't wear any shoes which have toes that turn out.

Thick Blood.

W. D. W. inquires whether a soreness or stiffness in the back of the calves indicates poor circulation or thick blood, and whether walking in good exercise in such a case.

Reply—No. It may be caused by foot strain, or by deep varicose (enlarged) veins. Walking is good. After the turns in.

INJURED YOUNG PEOPLE SHOW SOME IMPROVEMENT

Escape From Very Serious, If Not Fatal, Accident by Hay Riders Is Very Close.

WILD RUMORS AFLOAT IN CITY

Council Gets Offer of $25 for Wythe Street Franchise—Howell Citizens Ask Judge West for Better Police Protection.

PETERSBURG, VA., July 7.—The merry party of hay-riders—a dozen in number—who were injured in an accident last night on the Ferndale Park trolley line, in Dinwiddie County, are all getting along nicely to-day. They are all suffering more or less from bruises, and nearly all of them, after receiving aid at the hospital, have been sent to their homes. One of the most seriously injured is Mrs. Garbin, who, besides being bruised, had her left arm broken. She was not taken to the hospital, but remained at her home.

The escape from a very serious, if not fatal, accident was a very close one. The party, about twenty-five in number, were riding in a big four-horse trolley, driven by Sylvester Rose, colored. The driver attempted to cross the trolley back, on the Keenlyworth property, misjudging the distance of a rapidly approaching car. The motorist of the car did not see the vehicle until he was too close to prevent turning it into the brakes off the current and pulling the brakes immediately. This prevented a more serious accident. The wagon was badly broken and turned over against an iron pole, and the inmates in the rear were thrown out of the vehicle. The front part escaped injury.

The accident gave rise to wild rumors for a while, and caused much excitement, which was allayed by the knowledge that there were no fatalities. It appears that no one was very seriously injured. The names of the injured persons, with the exception of Mrs. Garbin, were published this morning in The Times-Dispatch.

$25 for a Franchise.

At the regular meeting of the Council last night bids were called for the Wythe Street franchise for the proposed electric railway from City Point to Petersburg. The only bid offered was one by the Petersburg and Appomattox Company, signed by T. M. Worthington, of Richmond, president of the company, naming $25 for the franchise. The bid was referred to the Finance Committee. Bids for the Hollingsbrook Street franchise will be received by the Council on July 19, when it is expected there will be five competitors for the rights by this route. The rival applicants for this franchise are the Petersburg and Appomattox Company, the Petersburg and James River Corporation. It is vaguely hinted that there may be a third bidder. The first-named company has been granted a franchise through Prince George by the Board of Supervisors. The Petersburg and James River Corporation has secured rights of way through private property, has already broken ground, contracted for the construction of the road and ordered steel rails for the track.

Other Council Matters.

The Council last night granted the request of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company to change its traffic rates on the City Point branch of the road. A communication was received from Mayor Cabaniss calling attention to the fact that W. C. Andrews, recently elected as a member of the Board of Police Commissioners, had failed to qualify within the time specified by law, and that the vacancy must be filled by another election. It appears that Mr. Andrews did qualify, but not within the ten days, as required by law. Reports of the city officers for June were read and filed. The Treasurer's report showed a cash balance of $5,000, and a total of $79,292.13. The appropriation of $5,000, asked for the completion of the new A. P. Hill public school, in the Sixth Ward, was laid over.

The Council, on motion of President Wheary, authorized the appointment of a special committee of three from the Council and two from the Board of Aldermen, to investigate the matter of the arrest and detention of so many persons for violations of city ordinances, entailing a heavy expense to the city.

Asks for Police Protection.

Before Judge West, of the Circuit Court of Prince George, yesterday, strong delegations of citizens of Hopewell appeared and urged the necessity of the county doing something to aid in the protection of that community by the appointment of a sufficient force of police. At present the police force of Hopewell is maintained by the Business Men's Association. At the conclusion of the hearing Judge West took the matter under advisement, saying he would announce his decision in a few days.

Declined to Ask for Bond Issue.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday gave further consideration to the proposition to issue bonds for the building of a highway from Petersburg to City Point, and for the improvement of the public roads generally. The board heard further arguments from advocates of the bond issue, but declined to ask Judge West, of the Circuit Court, to order a special election to allow the people to vote on the question. The board deemed the present time inappropriate for an election or for the issue of bonds. The friends of the proposition, however, do not propose to let the matter drop. They will bring it before the board again in the early future, and in the meantime.

SHOOTING FOLLOWS DISPUTE OVER LOCATION OF FENCE

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

LURAY, VA., July 7.—A family feud dating back twenty years came near ending in murder in this county yesterday, when Samuel Cullers, a traveling salesman, of Shenandoah County, formerly a merchant of Page County, of Springfield district, the difficulty arose over the location of a line-fence between Kauffman and Reuben Strickler, brothers-in-law. Cullers was visiting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Strickler, and went to Kauffman's home in order to arrange the location of the line-fence which was to have been built yesterday. He is alleged to have been cursed by Kauffman, when Cullers knocked Kauffman down with his fist. Then Kauffman ran to his house, se-
